"If you take $500 billion dollars over 10 years from Medi-Cal funding, either healthcare providers are going to fold or healthcare will be drastically limited," said Mike Thompson, U.S. Representative. (3/8/25)⁴

"Elders with nursing care, people with disabilities, and people who became eligible for Medi-Cal through expansion in the Affordable Care Act (ACA) are examples of those who could lose their health care insurance," said Jared Huffman, U.S. Representative. (3/8/25)⁴

Medicaid/Medi-Cal Administration Cuts:

The Republican backed budget directs the Department of Energy and Commerce (which has Congressional oversight over Social Security, Medicare, and Medicaid) to cut $880 billion in spending over the next 10 years.⁵

Where is the money going?

\$4.5 trillion dollars in tax cuts favor the wealthy (those making over \$430,000 get $\frac{3}{4}$ of the benefit) and raises the debt ceiling.⁶

To pay for the $4.5 trillion dollar tax cut, California could lose $10-$20 billion dollars per year as a result of the budget cuts, resulting in reductions to eligibility, services or provider rates.⁵

Cutting Medi-Cal could strain healthcare facilities like hospitals and clinics that are already underfunded, particularly in rural areas where hospital closures have outpaced openings in recent years.³

The potential challenges to California are enormous

Many of the proposed changes would shift significant costs to states. In California, this cost-shift could exceed $10 billion per year.

In order to replace lost federal dollars and protect the Medi-Cal program, state leaders would likely need to raise new state revenue, such as by eliminating tax breaks for the wealthy and profitable corporations.²
